On behalf of the board of directors of the Association of Community Health Nursing Educators (ACHNE) and the Association of Public Health Nurses (APHN) and the Joint Program planning committee, welcome to the 2016 Joint Conference of ACHNE and APHN. The theme of the conference is Public Health Nursing: Key to Our Nation’s Health.

Focusing on the theme and the conference objectives, presentations will include approaches for integrating into our education and practice; research, practice-based evidence, cost effective strategies, social justice, leadership, professional development and policy. We will hear from two national speakers who will expand our knowledge about key directions for public health and nursing that are designed to improve our nation’s health. The opening speaker, Jeanne Ayers, BSN, MPH, assistant commissioner for the Minnesota Department of Health, will discuss the efforts around health equity as a key to the nation’s future health. Our closing speaker, Kaye Bender, PhD, RN, FAAN, CEO of the Public Health Accreditation Board, Washington, DC, will share national strategies and challenges for improving population health. Both of the concepts presented by these nationally renowned speakers represent new and renewed directions for public health nursing.

The joint conference opens with a practice and education integrated pre-conference. Featured presentations will be on how to build evidence for public health nursing practice. The pre-conference presenters have successfully engaged in public health practice-based projects and in research. The plenary session on Friday will expand on the topic of the keynote and will offer attendees the opportunity to participate in activities and discussions about integration of the concept of health equity into our practice and curricula. There will be two exciting symposia, the first emphasizing writing for publication, and the second emphasizing the role of public health and nursing in building a culture of health. Many podium presentations and poster presentations have been selected to help public health nurses in practice and in academia recognize the importance of the conference objectives and how we can share in meeting these objectives.

Of course, there are many opportunities for sharing, socializing, and renewal. Two events for socializing are the walk/run with the incoming president of ACHNE and the popular event held last year, a social outing with old and new friends while enjoying the culinary delights of Indianapolis at the ‘Friday Night Meet, Greet and Eat’ event. Please remember to attend the awards luncheon on Friday to help us celebrate those being honored this year. Also enjoy breakfast, breaks, and lunches and share with others your thoughts about the presentations and events.

We hope you will enjoy, learn something new, share your expertise, relax, make new friends and renew friendships at the joint annual conference this year.
